Downtown Area

THE CITY FROM ITS ORIGIN

We could say that the central block of Guadalajara is one of the most interesting areas in any Latin American city. With strong links to its colonial past, the city center provides a catalog of colonial history, while its 20th-century growth has left a deep modern imprint on the urban landscape. It is definitely worth a visit.

The most emblematic area is the “Cruz de Plazas”, designed in the 20th-century, which consists of four public squares that surround the cathedral to form a Latin cross. These points feature the buildings that serve to define Tapatía identity, including the Government Palace, the San Agustín and La Merced churches, and the gardens of the Rotonda and the Plaza de Armas, with its beautiful art nouveau kiosk. The Regional Museum of Guadalajara, a former 18th-century convent, and the Degollado Theater, a symbol of Mexican fine arts, head this group of buildings.

In the city center there is the “Paseo Alcalde”, an urban project that attempts to replicate the old street of San Francisco a road that connects the Sanctuary neighborhood (where the old Civil Hospital and the Panteón de Belén are located) with the San Francisco and Aranzazú churches, crown jewels of the Mexican Baroque. From here you can see Juárez Square and Agua Azul Park.

However, the real treasure in the city center is the Hospicio Cabañas, the city’s most important neoclassical building, with a history that today is revived in the form of an internationally recognized cultural and artistic center.
